

Chapter 9 The 47th Problem

A few years ago I was invited to attend a meeting of MPs, Ministers and lay preachers from all different denominations, to discuss the situation in Northern Ireland, (or was it a political meeting to discuss the spiritual problem in Ulster!).

On reaching Donegal Square and City Hall in Belfast, I was walking towards it when the atmosphere changed dramatically and people began instinctively to hurry. RUC jeeps and soldiers suddenly lined the streets, stopping people at random. People began to speak about a huge bomb which had exploded in the city of London⁶³⁷, causing one billion pounds worth of damage. Rather than get caught up in the panic, I stepped into a coffee shop facing City Hall with large plate glass windows, for a coffee and hopefully a piece of Brack

The owner had turned the music up to way above comfort level, as if instinctively reacting to the situation. I sat looking out of the glass, as did everyone else watching a silent scene of people hurrying, army personnel patrolling and RUC armoured cars. It was like a film projected onto the glass, and the song playing was Van Morrison “Did you get healed”, is Van Morrison a Palestinian or Israeli, ...is he Arab or Jew I thought.

The talks were to discuss the problem of sectarian hatred and its solutions .. if any. The personal tragedies of thousands of people in Ulster would take an eternity to list, if anyone could stand to listen.

Nearly a year later, a second incident affected me greatly. I knew a girl who had a “sorrow that never was said”⁶³⁸, although it was well hid. One day I found her in tears and she related how she believed that it was not Gods will that her own children were born. She had two children, and was heavily pregnant with a third. She said her mother also believed this and convinced her it was true. Her mother was heavily involved with a Pentecostal Church and her Fathers side had been Presbyterian.

She had lost a child in her youth, before I knew her, and this new revelation was plainly disquieting and damaging to her, as it seemingly may have included this child also ?.

I protested, but this was her contention and belief and she would not be consoled. I do not know her now, but I wonder if this is still her belief .. she put great store in her mothers view.

Obviously atonement cannot be more limited than that, and I could not accept that this is what the church taught, any church or indeed any faith. Not that God could not make this decision, but that his creations could for him.

Astonishing as this seems, the reasons why such racial/religious feelings can be held, even ones so intimately woven, stretch back (unfortunately) into the history of philosophy and religion, some are absurd, many are complicated, and in more recent years they go to the heart of the Christian reformation.

Placing my experiences together I wondered if the “church” did indeed believe this, if so how did they decide who was or who was not in the club so to speak.

Anybody without knowledge in such matters, or who has never thought about such issues would ask. “ does God exist”, does he ‘save’ us, does he want to know us even, very simple questions like these...are we indeed in his “will” when we are born, or are we Bastards, created for no more purpose than shop window mannequins whilst others are legitimate, and how do we know who’s who.?

If you accept any of these thoughts then the next obvious problem or question asks if God initiates a “save”, whether by setting us objectives and/or directions to accomplish and complete, or by simply saving us without us doing anything. Either way there is a possibility whether it’s by the law (accomplishing objectives) or by grace (without us doing anything) This then being the case, who decides who does or who does not qualify ... of course only God can, no earthly authority, High Priest or individual can operate in those parts (or realms which are spiritual, this is not merely Christian philosophy but also Pythagorean i.e. pre – Christian

Despite this, and in particular regions of high sectarian conflict, destruction by grace, or the lack of it, Spiritual racism has developed into a political machine and also parallels a class or caste structure, it’s a unique experiment in the Christian world.(Especially if Christians can be engineered to kill each other, which if it has occurred, would initiate serious spiritual consequences)...all these points assume, the criteria is Christian, since we live in a Christian nation, and versions of Christianity are in conflict.

A simple resolution was to ask sixty or seventy established church leaders what their views were, since the reformation defined the religious denominations in Ulster and between the other three provinces, a good vehicle for forming a question in the hope of it obtaining an answer was the “Strawy epistle” problem of Martin Luther, the problem he had posed himself.

Martin Luther was a German theologian and monk, who had kept strict obedience to Roman Catholic practices, even to the point of cutting his knees in prayer, as he was earnestly determined to reach God, on his knees. At some point it occurred to him that all of his efforts to reach God were futile and that salvation and intimacy with God was received as a free gift, on no part of our making, by our faith alone, his grace alone. This made him unique at that moment although the idea was older than Christianity and had been suggested or expressed down the centuries until Martin Luther in 1520. The difference was, Luther maintained “contact” had actually occurred, and on a one-to-one basis with the “supreme”. The theory and speculation as to if this was possible if Luther was to be believed had dissolved and the effect or practice was fully realised. (so Luther maintained) He was also extremely pleased about it being more than an intellectual breakthrough.

He and his subsequent followers (they maintained) were then different from those who had not “made contact”.

However, as the “doctrine” (although in philosophical terms, the doctrine was rather an element and a fifth element at that, to make a poor analogy) spread, it fermented revolution and people merely began (not all) to see it as a tool to break political power with Rome.

Unfortunately, Martin Luther in later years replaced his supreme thoughts with inferior thoughts (in Christian terms) not just against Rome, but also against the lower classes, and joined in the revolutionary fervour. His attitude to the Jews seemingly did not extend to them being considered (at least to their choice to consider the idea for this salvation or new philosophy) and the following decree was issued by Luther ..

“We are not at fault for slaying them. Set fire to their synagogues and schools and bury or cover with dirt, whatever will not burn. This is to be done in honour of Our Lord and of Christendom so that God may see we are Christians”⁶³⁹ this quote from Martin Luther has been drawn from an Israeli soldier's outline of German history. He is a Marxist and the son of Holocaust victims.

Once again God is split, with presumptions even by the recipients of God's grace, that it is for them only but not for others. Naturally St. Paul did not advocate the actions Luther listed above, and considered that salvation should be shared, as the lost could be found eventually. Refraining from political inspirations and solutions which put political and geographical borders on God, has not been a feature of the church through most of its history.

The “strawy epistle” refers to the book of James, chapter 2, verse 18, which pertains to show his faith by his works. This was quoted back to Martin Luther who had explained his experience with Romans 3 v 27 – 28 in which we are justified by our faith alone. (A broader issue of faith over reason, or faith over science is also implicated)

My question simply asked if there was any real difference between these statements and approximately 75 letters were sent, 60 of the addresses/recipients are listed in Appendix 10A at the back of this book. Approximately 30 replied and I have ticked those who replied in a column alongside the addresses. I added on the question, that if we are justified at all, how do we relate to God after this has occurred. Every reply which ranged from leaders and theologians in the Roman Catholic Anglican, Methodist and Presbyterian free churches and others, stated they found no contradiction to the verses. This alone was interesting as it is commonly stated that Roman Catholics and Protestants are different, because of their different attitudes to these verses – to this day ... obviously this is untrue.

Secondly, not one replied saying they did not believe salvation occurred at some point, and further no one decreed some people were exempt from salvation for whatever reason (mainly prejudice).

Thirdly, all agreed that the works referred to in James were works of faith practiced after salvation (with no legal obligation) directed by the third person of God the Holy Spirit.
(some of these letters can be viewed at the end of chapter 5)

For political reasons, scholars have maintained a distinction in the early New Testament Church between the first century Jewish Christian Church (represented in error by James, supposed salvation by law) and the Gentile-Hellenistic church (represented by Paul in Romans) and grace, there is no distinction although the Roman Catholic Church in Martin Luther’s day maintained salvation began at point of Baptism of an infant (which it still does) rather than a mature (coming of age in children) realisation by people themselves. Thus it requires no Gnostic knowledge or intermediary between man or God.

As the Roman Catholic letter (see end of chapter 5) was pertaining to “the no difference” in the verses, then this admits that Faith is not by works, ours or a priests and more importantly babies, (born or unborn), infants and toddlers are innocent of not knowing the law or the Grace of God and are not damned or lost or out of his will. (according to the Church)

Therefore salvation does occur, and is open to all, the only alternative to this is it does not occur in any way. If the latter is true then, discrimination between Christian denominations, for political or spiritual reasons has no basis, since none can claim to ever be a part of God or to ever know him and is absurd ! It naturally follows no division between denominations exists, and therefore no division in Ulster or in “Ireland” as a whole can exist. Either way no child, born or unborn can have it said of them, they are not in Gods will. (its best to be exacting in such matters).

God it seems and according to the Church, who serve him do not see a distinction between Catholics and Protestants. The question is does the state obey the Church and God or itself.

Every reply was copied and re-sent back to the church leaders, who originally did not reply and also sent back to those who did. By this I mean each name and address received a copy of each letter of approximately 30, with my own thoughts. The meeting which had been planned in Belfast was directed to solutions to sectarian problems and it means that both sides (who in their replies, agree their errors in any case) ditch those errors in the hope of a deeper understanding and as a removal of sectarian obstacles which have accumulated in history, but only exist in peoples prejudices.

Extra copies of the by-now large letter were also sent to the girl who believed her own children were “not Gods will”, and who had lost a child, before he/she was born, and naturally innocent, and also a part of Gods will.

A copy was sent to her mother (the children’s grandmother) who also believed and indoctrinated this belief on her daughter. Copies were also sent to the mother’s church and the churches leaders (Head office and or H.Q. etc). Each had a letter of explanation and the third child was born, healthy with an equally beautiful smile having an equal choice of salvation and a full a life as possible like everybody else.

Therefore if its true for one its true for all, or at least the chance is available to all. That's you , me, them, everybody !.

Children are innocent, unborn children in the womb, and children who die before birth, or children who die as toddlers.

Even disregarding this Christian premise we can search through the thoughts of early philosophies, and philosophers to realize there is nothing new under the sun. Whether we learn the philosophy or not we can all wonder at the Universe.

The Druids and modern freemasonry accept the ideas of Pythagoras, and the Druids had a belief in a Triune god with three personalities. This belief was with them before Christianity reached these Islands (in the early first century and some hundreds of years before the saxon invasions.) who developed his teachings in and through the Egyptian, Babylonian, Chaldean mysteries, and who some believe instructed early Jewish rabbis and thinkers.

Pythagoras although a monotheist described God as the supreme mind distributed throughout the Universe, the cause of all things, and the intelligence of all things, and the One that is everything. He was born around 600 – 590 bc (Pythagoras !)

He was and is therefore still very influential on modern thinking, although many a schoolboy and girl have winced at the thought of spending two hours listening to words like “hypotenuse”.

Pythagoras divided the Universe into 3 distinct planes on which the 3rd or supreme plane God existed.

These planes were the 1) Inferior, 2). Superior and 3). Supreme.

The superior part was the plane of the immortals or Angels (although some lower beings or Angels also existed) in the inferior part .Beings on this inferior plane like you or me were capable of realising the second or superior, by way of reason or thought or wisdom,.

The inferior, superior and supreme parts, surrounding God suggests the inferior does not invade the supreme... (according to Pythagoras) In any case one part cannot move into another without the supreme part being aware, or without its authority, all that can occur is the Supreme part, is able to reach down to the inferior.

This 3-fold universe according to Pythagoras was elegantly displayed in the triangle. A law of threes, 3 sides all connected. Some have claimed that the Christian notion of the Trinity is therefore, not scriptural but a pre-Christian philosophy.

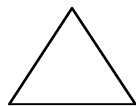

In a similar metaphysical doctrine the Christian church has 1) regeneration, 2) salvation and 3) sanctification, which are suggested as follows

1) Contact or awakening, 2) a birth to a new reality, 3) and perfection moving as it does in a linear line along the path of our lives, of course the 4th occurs after life has ended (although opinions vary)

It is this last part (3) which is the hardest for the “church” to maintain, as indeed for each individual Christian, as it is minute by minute walk and can be very disconcerting, albeit rewarding. This is why church leaders embroil themselves in politics and political solutions to life’s problem and the class struggle. To explain simply, a Jehovah’s Witness who once came to my front door, tried to explain to me that there is not “such a thing as the “Trinity” and indeed the bible does not have the word Trinity within it. However, the verse’s in Matthew 28, 19 that instructs Christians to baptise in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit and was the definitive authority for such an action. It occurred to me that this was also a description of the Trinity by a member of the Trinity. The father being one joined by the Son, and eventually the third the Holy Spirit, if this can be imagined in a linear way.

Relating this to the “J.W.” and his friends, I found out many months later, he had become a Christian. Although there is no word “Trinity” in the Bible it is made plain, in both testaments. Was Jesus a student of Pythagoras, or his teacher ?

The problem with a dot . or a line _____
Or a triangle

Is the dot, which could represent the inferior part or lowest element, or realm, (according to Pythagoras) is unaware it can become a line and broaden its horizons. Likewise the line does not realise, the second realm, or superior part, can become a 3rd part or realm or supreme.

However, the supreme part can make the other parts aware of themselves in and in so doing, it can become more than two-dimensional but three-dimensional.

The Addition of a fourth dimension brings an extra view or a new reality. Just as the dot could not see itself as a line, or the line could not imagine corners, so two-dimensional objects cannot imagine breadth, width, and a height.

We in our three dimensional life cannot imagine a fourth dimension, where solid matter and the laws of physics do not exist.

Even here in this fourth dimension, true perfection cannot be perfect, unless it is accompanied by love, which is a fifth dimension (of sorts) In any case who would want to be without it.

The dot has grown into a complete and perfect sphere....we perceive in three dimensions, and wonder if the fourth exists. Science states that a fourth dimension in some form does exist !, for example in explanations of time travel or unexplained aspects to the Universe, is this scientific explanation cutting edge science or just a poor grasp at explaining a spiritual dimension.

In Christian terms the whole point of creation is to have additions. A dot cannot remain as a dot, a line as line, or a triangle as a 3 dimensional object in existence alone, perfection needs momentum it can never stand still, until it is perfect. Likewise creation had to continue, creation has to happen as that is a perfect and unavoidable occurrence. The problem with philosophy is that perfect mathematics does not read like a psalm.

A triune God seemingly needed additions to the Universe, as our knowledge of him shows that he was pre-existent to all matter, he could have remained in that existence without creating.

Since we are made in his image, this duplication can continue ad-infinitum.

The patterns of creation in Geometry, display an elegance, which leads many to believe some higher force, some great architect is directing the very movement and inner and outer design of the Universe.

When Euclid built on Pythagoras discovery, concerning the ratios of triangles and the length of their sides. (although it is thought the Sumerians, before the Egyptians also knew this rule), it was seen that a triangle with sides of say 3 metres, and a base of 4 metres, that the Hypotenuse (the longest edge) will be 5 metres.(also known as the Egyptian string trick, in that they tied a string into 12 knots, then joined the ends. Marking out 3 knots on one side, and 4 knots on the other, leaving 5 knots on the Hypotunse, and a perfect right angle, when all sides met.) this constant proved very useful for builders and stonemasons down through the centuries, and a cornerstone of design, and construction ever since. Some would add that mysticism combined with this design also allows us to fathom the mysteries of the Universe.....(perhaps)

If you draw a circle so that all three points of a triangle, touch the circle at some point, other constants can be drawn at other intersections, forming reliable and true plotting dimensions. The drawing or creation can then begin to look very complex, and yet it started out as a simple dot.

Of course you could also form a square and divide it diagonally across the middle, but this would mean you would need a perfect right angle before you could begin, and the 47th problem becomes circular.

As stonemasons formed into guilds, the guilds protected trade (and the construction methods and secrets) by disallowing anyone outside of the guild to be entered. Foreign trade was kept at bay so protecting the available work at home. As this grew and extended internationally, those within and those without no longer conformed to the unqualified or qualified, but to a club which became a Quasi – religious, depending on if you approach the rituals with a spiritual or scientific intent. Distinctions between “those without and we within”, became an increasing factor in the development of society.

Once the international links were established a order of a new class, could emerge, and it is this new class, which Anti- semetic adherents claim is run by Jewish, or pro Zionist Cartels. The problem is the same view also suggests that they are not Jewish by blood ?, presenting a contradiction. Further a census of these Cartels, which would reveal numbers, is not available. The master race however has a propensity to blame another “race” rather than look at itself.

Joining these linear elements (as Euclid calls them) with the perfect triangle, we move beyond a world of visible matter to the Spiritual, and we can see a different side to ourselves. Geometrically we are left with a feeling of awe as how could the Universe have formed around us and before us, and what is outside of the Universe, what was there before it was formed...in biblical terms what or who was there before the first line in Genesis in Chapter 1. ?

A triune God perplexes the minds of theologians and philosopher alike, even the notion of a God to monotheists, or a belief in God at all is mysterious enough, accepting a “one God” in the singular concept, never mind a Trinity is all the more unfathomable.

Following Pythagorean or Christian theology, which has in any case adapted many of his, Plato and/or Aristotle’s thoughts and their ideas of creation. The nature of the Universe (providing we accept these philosophers ideas were not pre- existent to the Supreme being of course) are inherent in Christian belief.

Whether we follow a geometrical line, or immerse ourselves in Church ritual its not until we realise that there is a God, who also wants to be loved in return. More than a mono (dot) or a line, more complete than a triangle, the Supreme Being has a personality, which is fuller and more interesting than two-dimensional concepts of God, currently the mode of Christianity and ritual generally.

It does not stop there as this same Trinitarian Supreme being is also mysterious and fourth dimensional, and with the fifth dimension and fifth element, he actively participates in the other dimensions also.
Eureka!

Being in his image why are we not as he exactly. We seem small in comparison, limited, sometimes as dolls or action men in a wider perplexing Universal playground.

How can perfection create perfection, which can be aware it is perfect? Can a triune God create another Omnipotent triune God? Can God create a rock, heavier than he can lift? .Can there be two everywhere,...which interestingly is the dilemma facing the 1) laws of Quantum mechanics and 2) general order/relativity theory, and also the dilemma facing those who believe in 1) Absolute Calvinistic Predestination, and those who believe 2) God can both transcend this world and participate in it.

Creating another supreme omnipotent God may be just as impossible as creating another Universe (as opposed to galaxy or solar system) to fit along side the first.....there is no room. We are the solution to the problem. We unite both laws, as we have free choice, total haphazard, messy free choice, existing in an invisible Universe of order surrounding us, in time, out of time in relative harmony.

As mentioned in chapter 5, however since we did not choose to be born, then this is not autonomy. If we wish to live as immortal, for eternity, then this free choice must also be a choice to factor into the chaos we have through free will.... otherwise some argue it is control.

To repeat can God create a rock heavier than he can lift ?, can he create two everywhere, one which is sovereignty independent from him, and one which does not exist as a hell, but as a “Elysium” (to choose a description) as immortals.

Maybe the answer lies in the fact that we do not fully know God, if we did then why would we leave him...But of course some choose to do just that, if we believe the story of the fall, and the fallen angels. A very interesting bible question asks us all “where can you go from my presence” ?

A perfect three of course, can either exist as evil or good, and it cannot remain motionless, resisting the inevitable desire to create, once it did become three or realise it was perfect, as three, then Love,.. a result of perfection needs to expand and become the fourth part, it is creation as Agape love.

Love needs to expand, it cannot be held in or back. Questions then arise as to whether the Supreme Being needs us or cherishes us. Since we are here it's a moot point.

Indignation follows, and it is a step many find too much to understand, they feel it reduces Gods Omnipotence in their eyes ..after all he should remain distant and Holy and Aloof as creator of the Universe..

It is distasteful and shocking for some to contemplate. This attitude most usually occurs in the ritualistic religious character, with more interest in church buildings or repetitive patterns of playing at church, with addiction to the church service rather than trying to know God.

Early philosophy had four elements fire, earth wind and water, but the fifth element has eluded all description, no one has come close.

Racial inequality, or religious bigotry, cannot make any sense to a child. As the system in the world says all wars are created by religion, then using a “religious” analogy means that the creator created us as equal and innocent whichever background we are from. As a further analogy, children sometimes are not wanted, but does the Architect of the Universe share our view ..its hard to see why or indeed how.

It seems the elements and forms of the universe have feelings and a personality, even Pythagoras taught that men and women are created in the image of God. Albert Einstein theories on relativity produced the following analogy

“When a man sits with a pretty girl for an hour, it seems like a minute. Now let him sit with a hot stove for a minute – and it’s longer than an hour – that’s relativity”⁶⁴¹. Boom $E=MC^2$. Wielded with love not evil. Einstein, Newton, Pythagoras, Aristotle, Plato have been so instrumental in shaping our lives, many would not believe how much the influence affects their daily lives, without them noticing

Of course you could also argue that if God exists could he make a ray of light travel more slowly than the current calculated constant, perhaps he could make it travel faster, or even at millimetres per second...if so would the Universe seem closer, would time stop or slow. Theologians could argue that light may well travel at a constant speed, and that it has always done so, but then they would also have to admit that God could make the light travel slowly, both being true simultaneously !.A certain characteristic of light is that it seems unstoppable and boundless.

Taking this further perhaps God could make one end of a linear ray of light travel faster than the current estimated speed of light, whilst the other end travels at a given speed of millimetres per second.Eventually both ends will have travelled as far as each other.The faster end travelling circular through time and space, could meet the slower end again,(and again) and travel into it, being with it in time and space, and yet simultaneously light years away. The resultant collision, repeated over and over causing an explosion of light so brilliant, that the ring of light blotted out the darkness for ever and ever.

Proving this mathematically takes time, or of course it could be completely in error, or completely correct depending on how desperate we are for a theory.

What does this all mean ?, it means were loved, pure and simple the rest is extremely dull in comparison.

What else has the cosmos and the sun, moon and stars revealed down through the ages. The captured Israelites and those from Judah were made into slaves in Babylon, but were eventually freed and yet stayed., although Nehemiah led many back to Jerusalem

With the Israelites into Babylon came their culture and the expectations of a Messiah, a priestly King and prophetic saviour. The Babylonians and the Magi also awaited a messiah, and the Sorcerer Zarathustra had left a legacy of a messiah who would be announced by a mysterious star. The intermingling of Israeli and Babylonian traditions in Persia, meant the Persians only frame of reference was to await a star which would lead them to the Messiah.

Persia was at war with Rome and Herod the Roman puppet Governor of the province was told of a prophecy in the book of Micah of the coming of a King, a prophecy in Isaiah also purported Bethlehem and the lineage of this messiah.

The Magi brought with them Gold for a King, Frankincense for a priest and Myrrh for a physician. Myrrh having qualities today which have been muted, for curing cancer and is used for embalming the dead. For any vast train of Babylonian Magi to set out, risk the deserts and the bandits and reach Jerusalem, was plausible but dangerous.

To enquire of Herod about the birth of a new king was to drop a bomb into a political minefield.

The British Museum has clay tablets from ancient Persia which relate that Israel is either symbolised by Pisces or Aries. Both Jupiter (Jupiter being the morning star) and Saturn were eclipsed by the moon in 7,BC (Pisces) and 6,BC (Aries) highly significant to Zarathustrian mystics, and indicative in preparing for a journey. It seems that Pisces represents Israel whilst Aries Judah. It is unlikely that the Magi met an infant in a stable, more likely they presented their gifts when Jesus was a two years old.

Yet if we are to believe this story an Omnipotent God came to earth asa Baby helpless ...a complete reversal.

Children, and babies who are considered superfluous, or not in Gods will, are instantly cast down. Here lies the seeds of racism, and discrimination of all kinds. No one person is responsible for their parents actions or the place and manner of their birth, and so no-one has the right to step in and denounce them. The bible tells us that God knew us in the womb, and was their when we were sown together, even at the point of conception.

Already the birth of this prophet has caused ripples between three nations, who ruled most of the known world. We may celebrate this event on December 25th, but in Spain (with its Moorish influence) for example, still exchange presents on Three Kings Day on the sixth of January, our last day of Christmas. Mid winter is not thought to be the true date of his birth.

The Prophets birth caused a stir, but his death also greatly affected the elements. occurring as it did on, or around a Jewish Passover.

The Talmud is not complimentary to Jesus Christ, yet its roots also extend back to Babylon. It speaks unkindly of Jesus, yet in a tractate “Yoma” in the order (book) of “Moad” there is an intriguing section. Yoma deals with the specific instructions for the Day of Atonement and it was written in 260AD. In section 39 it says there was a “Cosmic change” in the temple courts. “Temple doors opened by themselves”⁶⁴². “Our Rabbi taught us that these things happened in the 40 years before the destruction of the temple”, this would be about 30AD. The temple guards were so alarmed they rebuked the temple saying “Oh temple, what ails thee”. It was clear that this had Messianic expectations, as the temple shook.

The Jewish historian Josephus writes, “the Eastern gate of the temple courts in Jerusalem, built from solid brass, heavy, and hardly being shut and moved by twenty strong men, resting on steel foundations, with long deep screws bolted on the rock ground, was seen in public, opened up by itself in the sixth hour of the night”⁶⁴³. This gate in temple mount was dozens of feet high and was an awesome structure. Josephus was describing an event from around 30AD.

The Roman Emperor Tiberius received a report from Pontius Pilate which described abnormal events surrounding the day of Jewish Passover, between the years 26 and 36AD

“the sun was darkened, the stars appeared and in all the world people lighted lamps from the sixth hour till evening; the moon appeared like blood”⁶⁴⁴, The report speaks of earthquakes felt in Asia Minor and violent storms. Tertullian, a Christian philosopher from the Alexandrian School, writing between 190 to 220AD, confirms that there was such a report written by Pilate to Tiberius⁶⁴⁵. Tertullian also speaks about the “Bishops of Ireland” who were (by 190AD) already established Christians. An interesting event occurs in Armagh and is recorded in the book of Lienister⁶⁴⁶ concerning the darkening skies which covered the seat of the High Kings of Ireland at Emian Macha. The High King Conchobor MacNessa and the Ulaid (Ulstermen) noted that it lasted for “hours”. The existence of Conchobor, has recently been strengthened by discoveries of archaeological evidence in Longford, Co. Roscommon, Ireland, pertaining to his exploits in the Tochmare Etaine and Book of Lienister⁶⁴⁷.

Across the globe in China “the sun was encased in a halo, with a white rainbow penetrating the halo” and then “the moon had a five layered halo, and an area of the heavens was dark blue and yellow like a rainbow, there was a black vapour like clouds, the moon and stars not visible”⁶⁴⁸.

A Greek historian Phelgon, who wrote the Olympiads, reports the following “In the fourth year of the 202nd Olympiad, there was an eclipse of the sun which was greater than any known before and in the sixth hour of the day it became night, so that the stars appeared in the heaven and a great earthquake that broke out in Bithynia destroyed the greater part of Nicacia” (Asia Minor)⁶⁴⁹. Eusebius in different language confirms the eclipse and the earthquake in Bithynia⁶⁵⁰.

Clearly the events surrounding this particular Passover heavily affected the atmosphere and the elements. The bible also describes these disturbances. The problem is, are they recording the same events and what was different about this Passover that the Temple in Jerusalem would be so disturbed? that the ground erupted into earthquake and the sun and the moon and the stars were affected.

A wise man, who drew both Jews and Gentiles to himself⁶⁵¹ around 30AD and who was called Jesus Christ was also in Jerusalem days before the Passover feast. The population of Jerusalem at this time was about six hundred thousand, but during the Passover numbers would swell anywhere up to two million⁶⁵² swelling Jerusalem to well over three times its size. Arriving at least two weeks before, in order to ensure they could prepare for the seven days of ritual purification, they came from Asia Minor, Egypt, Africa, Italy, Greece and Mesopotamia⁶⁵³. Those closer to home would perhaps attend at Jerusalem three times a year, Pentecost (at the feast of the giving of the law), the feast of Booths and Passover, many however saw the journey as a once in a lifetime journey or attended every few years⁶⁵⁴.

The Sanhedrin authorities prepared, repaired roads and amenities and people prepared their homes to receive families they had not seen for years, everything was gleaming for the feast. Tombs outside of Jerusalem were whitewashed to prevent travellers entering into them (to rest and sleep on the long journey) lest they touch a corpse which would mean lengthy and elaborate rituals to purify the defilement of the Temple. The wise men Jesus Christ who had infuriated the Pharisees, used the whitewashed tombs as analogy to describe them⁶⁵⁵. On the outside they were respectable but their inner man was dead, rather than being guides to attract multitudes to the light, they led instead to death and decay, they planned his death. Commercial activities increased in the city and shops and markets imported and stocked up for the feast.

Jerusalem had approximately three hundred and sixty synagogues and each was accustomed to draw people of like minds and trades and class. There were synagogues of Blacksmiths, potters, goldsmiths, tentmakers even a synagogue of Greek speaking Jews⁶⁵⁶ and the synagogue was not the only place of learning. There was also the hiring hall, the grange and fraternal lodge People in their trades exchanged knowledge and artisans displayed new skills, business deals were made and new apprentices were hired. Many travellers brought trade goods to be exchanged for currency, rare spices, silks and elaborate foods. The streets of the city became alive in the influx of peoples from all over the known world, in and out of the streets and passages preparing for the great day.

Seven days before the Passover the wise man Jesus Christ had been teaching near the temple, not in itself unusual as Jerusalem was teeming with itinerate Rabbis who had come to exchange views and celebrate with everyone else. However, in a dramatic display of rage the wise man Jesus entered the temple and accused the High Priests and traders of turning the House of God into a den of thieves⁶⁵⁷, concentrating this rage on the moneylenders who had taken over the Temple.

People attending the Passover were required to choose a sacrificial lamb on the tenth of Nisan⁶⁵⁸. Almost everyone bought a lamb inside the temple which had already been certified as “without blemish or spot” they knew from bitter experience if they bought one outside the temple, the priests would reject it, always managing to find some minute imperfection in examination. This way trade in lambs was protected, available only from the High priests and their vendors. Six days later they would examine Jesus Christ for his blemish or spot.

The Passover for the temple Priests had begun weeks earlier, when watchmen were posted around the hills of Jerusalem on the thirtieth day of the month in February or March²³. As soon as the first edge of a new moon was sighted, they would run into Jerusalem to a house kept especially for the purpose and the reports were examined by the President of the Sanhedrin If he was satisfied, he would announce “it is consecrated”. The information was then broadcast from the Mount of Olives by beacon fires throughout the land, thus fifteen days later would mark the 15th of Nisan or Passover day when the moon was full. On the 14th of Nisan, the blood of the slain lamb would be applied with Hyssop to the door posts of the houses from left to right and then to the top level forming in the air a cross of blood, through which Jewish families would pass to mark the Exodus when the angel of death “passed over” the Hebrews , but not the first born of the Egyptians at the time of Moses.

Since the full moon marked the Passover it is dependant on its cycle to which weekday the Passover would fall. There was only a one in seven chance it would fall on a Friday when the Jewish Sabbath would begin at 6.00pm (to the following day on Saturday at 6.00pm). It is more likely that the Passover a separate feast albeit yearly was not on a Friday, but on the Thursday with the preparation day on Wednesday. A full moon is recorded on a Wednesday for the years AD 27 AD 30²⁵. Three days after this, on Saturday afternoon, which by late afternoon early evening was considered twilight, and marking the end of the weekly Sabbath. this makes resurrection day Saturday afternoon ...moving into Sunday beginning at 6.00pm (on our Saturday !). Jewish days begin at 6.00pm and finish 6.00pm the following day ..like the Celts they reckoned by the moon not the sun.

Finally the wise man was arrested and brought before the high priests twice and before Herod, and before Pontius Pilate for four trials. A lamb had seemingly come from outside of the temple and its blemish and spot was that he claimed to be the Son of God and so it was rejected by the Temple (which if true was also an amazing case in juxtaposition in that the defendant was both innocent and guilty of the charge).

On this mid-week afternoon, after being sentenced by Pilate to death by crucifixion, (in which no-one stood and cried im Spartacus .. or I am the Son of God except Jesus Christ of Nazareth Yeshua Baruch Ha Ba B’Shem Adonai,)

At precisely the time of this preparation for this High Feast⁶⁵⁹ a lamb was ritually slaughtered in the temple as the crucified wise man was raised on the cross. Later that day the temple doors blew open by themselves as the Talmud, and indeed Josephus suggest. This was in plain view, in Jerusalem, not just the seat of government and religion but also the seat of a commercial city.

Many months and years later this seemingly tragic incident was seen by many Jews in Jerusalem as a victory for Judaism, for their own personal spirituality and a victory over the temple.

A Jewish scholar and military man named Saul, who once persecuted the new sect of the Nazarenes (Christians) for the Roman-Judaic administration, later joined the cult and had this to say concerning the sentence, death and resurrection of this wise man.

He relates that rather than a tragedy, the death of this man disarmed the principalities and powers which was not just a temporal earthly battle, but a universal war, fought, won and ceremonially declared. This was a military battle, a spiritual offensive, a total victory in every sense.

The Jewish scholar and Roman citizen was Saul (or Paul to Christians in his writings, known as Colossians⁶⁶⁰) He says that the wise man (Yeshua) spiritually performed an ‘Apek duomal’ (pronounced ap-ek-douo–maiee) which in Greek was an armistice signing ceremony conducted by the Roman army, a military event

Accordingly the Roman general victorious in battle would demand the defeated general would show up in front of him and sign papers of defeat. The defeated general would have to appear in his full military regalia. In front of his former troops, it was declared that his title, lands, servants, chattels and all his possessions were forfeit. In other words the victorious general would state that what you were, I now am, the titles you held, I now hold, your armies will now obey me and your nations will forever be subject to my rule. What your name was I take by victory and my name is greater than yours.

According to Paul this declaration was made throughout the Universe and the victory and declaration was like a splitting of the atom, with no formulae that could be calculated or defined as crudely as $E=MC^2$ the aftershock waves rippling to the outer edges of the Universe, if there be any edge, and they have been getting stronger in the return journey.

To the Romans this was apparent, to the Jews emotive, to the Persians and followers of Zarathursta, the idea was mooted in debate, that one God, who perhaps had claimed to be the true “good” God had defeated the “evil” dark God was also a marvel .All faiths could draw on this war and see facets of the victory others could not.

Followers of Christ have told their stories and testified to that victory as follows

A former Scots Guard who was drafted into the SAS, told of how he sat as a boy in a cold house by a table in Dundee waiting for his Mother to return home, he waited and waited.

She never did, she had committed suicide, by jumping from a eight story building and his Father was not around .He joined the army who taught him that they could not break him (or was it the other way around), but he did receive praise for his abilities (he told me he could kill in twenty two different ways with his bare hands)

Having he says never felt anything, other than physical love, he says he mistook the armies encouragements for love and redoubled his efforts.....this view was abandoned after realizing the love of God, he is no longer in the Army.

Former members of the IRA and Ulster Paramilitaries have testified together on the love of Christ. Each more amazed than the other.

Some of them with the help of R.A.F., cadets collected 12 articulated lorries of clothes and blankets and food from all over these Islands and sent them to Kosovo .The refugees in the Balkans war were amazed at the response Two hundred of them came to Manchester to live , and at a function room in Cheetham Hill in the city a young girl aged 5, a Muslim through a interrupter introduced herself and stated she would recite a poem for our benefit.

Up she walked to the front of the stage and waited for silence and began the poem as follows...(as near as I can remember)

She said that one night an “American” bomb made a large noise and a bright light as she was sitting with relatives and friends in Father and Mothers house. After the noise and through the darkness and rubble she found her grandmother who carried her out past her dead mother and father and sisters and brothers and aunts and uncles and friends who were covered by blood and concrete.

She walked away from her house with her Grandmother through the cold and mud and her grandmother fell many many times along the way.

They finally came to a open field after crossing the mountains, the tall mountains with streams of ice flowing down them. In the field was a camp and tents with lots of children with no mama or papa just like me, some mamas and papas were crying for their dead children. We lived in this tent and were fed sandwiches and given clothes and then we left there and took a train and travelled to England, and to this place and now I am telling this to you..... this poem took ten minutes and was very detailed.... ..her voice never faltered and was strong and when she and the girl interpreting also from Kosovo had finished no one made a sound.

The irony was that although the food and clothes she received were free, the bomb was paid for by the audiences and everybody’s (all our taxes) taxes , could we tell her this ..in a poem.

A Scots Guard (Mr Bond!)a Liverpudlian related how the living nightmare of being stationed in Chelsea barracks, meant he would leave at night rather than be terrorised by his own, this included being beaten every night, forced bathing in urine, and excrement, and daily punishments of a more psychological kind.

Ironically he says the same tourists who watched him in his bear hat standing motionless, taking snapshots would walk over him as he slept rough on the streets of London.

The story of the young soldier girl murdered at Deepcut barracks, (and others) can have light shed on it by Mr Bond who is now no longer shaken or stirred by his ordeal.

An American soldier who was drafted into Vietnam (Pastor Dennis Balcombe) told of the long walks through dense Jungle and of one particular raconteur which came under heavy artillery fire from the Viet – Cong

Forced to the ground his squadron took cover. Through the undergrowth and below the bullets to the side of the napalm he came across a wounded Viet - Cong , whereupon he told him he was a Christian and shared his testimony.

The startled Viet – Cong listened and left and was rescued by his comrades. When Pastor Balcombe returned to the camp he was barraged by questions on why he did not shoot the enemy especially as he was carrying his rifle, to which he replied as a Christian he could not kill and it was his duty to share the Gospel.

They said he was crazy,... he said they were crazy, and did they know why they were fighting this war.He was sent back to America to be court – martialled...he also related how one squadron had suddenly gone mad in the jungle and had started killing each other (the mind altering drug experiments, the U.S. practised on its own are now well documented) causing him to see Viet –Nam as a true hell on earth.

He apparently repeated the story to astounded army court rooms and the reason why he did what he did and also asked why they were in this war (etc)

The case ended in the United States supreme court.

On attending the hearing he was amazed and puzzled to find the flower power generation or hippies (as he termed the crowd) campaigning on his behalf with placards outside the court marching in circles

He repeated his story and was acquitted as although it would have been a breach of protocol not to carry his rifle as a US marine or any soldier, it was not illegal or a breach of regulations, the Supreme court of the United States of America, the most powerful nation on earth found,... if that rifle did not contain bullets....and his rifle throughout his “tour” of Viet-nam did not.(Good morning Vietnam)...this kind of touring could spread.

Essentially with or without the American troops the Viet – Cong would have received this Gospel of Christ, through Pastor Balcombe or another Christian. When Hong Kong was handed back to China after the lease had expired he explained it was his duty to stay as a Christian, even though many western Christian leaders had fled

He also felt that the west owed a duty to China and to the Chinese of that region, as in leasing Hong Kong for a pittance the west had also imported Heroin into the area to create a market of addicts and destabilise the community ensuring they could then open up trade routes, and exploit the resources, the people and the dignity of the Chinese by deception. He did not recognize this as Christianity .For this he has earned the respect and admiration of Chinese people everywhere

Christianity also gives you compassion for your enemies, even when you have totally defeated them, and you have let them know you could have destroyed them, it is Christ who gives you the ability to think and act in this way.

Ironically, this is a hard way to think,its especially hard for western people to accept that there are no good..or bad sides in war, only a few leaders, and gunmen who at the top of both sides, force us, the majority into war, its hard not to want revenge especially when duplicity gives way to false claims of cries for war.

Take one example Viet-Nam is still suffering depleted uranium contamination all these years on, as is the former Yugoslavia (now Serbia Montenegro), dropped during the N.A.T.O. bombing of the country in 1999, as are the Iraqis and the British troops who served there.

The area in southern Scotland where “D.U.” testing takes place reports higher than normal cancer and leukaemia rates and maldeformed babies. One war veterans community in Mississippi U.S.A.reorts 66% increase in cancer and leukaemia’s, and 67 % maldeformities. The idea of the long range kill has now taken over propaganda, in the hope a low body count of returning soldiers corpse depletes the anti – war sentiment. Even here both sides suffer and “D.U.” which is a cheap by – product of enriched uranium does not discriminate between civilians and army.

Once you actually recognise the enemy how sickening is the sight of your own duplicity with them.

Today Christian leaders can not recognize that Christianity will spread without the need of 200 Billion Dollars paying for armies to kill innocent civilians anywhere, or even for an armed enemy everywhere. Its aim is to save people from a living nightmare but not by deception but by love. Wielding its power by faith requires six weeks of basic training in how not to carry a rifle, parade around, or kill people with works.(with time off and/or a six weeks pass)

Mankind has the power to destroy itself without Gods help, that power will come from inside the Western military complex. All those warriors who exist within those armies should come to realise that unquestioning obedience, continuing as a “grunt” to a leadership which is not fighting for the supreme part but is wallowing in the inferior, disrespecting life and destroying is not fit to command you.of course there have been many acts of heroism from western men and woman serving in wars from all nations, not just atrocities, but in both men, woman and children were killed, and sometimes both sides were Christian in belief (Historically at least)

Taking the bomb which fell on Hiroshima, which killed over a quarter of a million people, and the U.S. is the only country to use these weapons of mass destruction in history, its tonnage was 15 tonnes.

Taking a small example of the west’s nuclear stockpile, the trident nuclear submarines, which is not a “independent British nuclear deterrent” as it is made in the U.S, and returns their to be serviced, has on board 16 nuclear missiles with 3 warheads each, each warhead has a tonnage of 100 tonnes. This makes 4,800 tonnes of nuclear power in Just one sub.

Divide this by 15 tonnes as in the Hiroshima bomb and times by a quarter of a million and we arrive at 80 million people. Britain has four of these submarines.

The US has 18 submarines with 24 missiles, each with 3 warheads. making a possible kill rate for one of them at 120 million, all 18 will be able to wipe out 2 billion 160 million, whilst the British subs can kill collectively 320 million. Between them that’s three quarters of the worlds population in one go.

Since “ww2” the west has spent 5 trillion dollars that’s $5,000,000,000,000.If 1 Trillion was laid end to end it would stretch to the moon, and this was a famous quote by president Reagan in the 1980s. Israel has one to two hundred nuclear warheads (nobody outside of solitary confinement for revealing these figures is completely sure)

In September 2002 the US announced its “National security strategy” (which is published and readable on the web⁶⁶¹ since that date ..this is not hidden) which intends (it says) to run the world by force using pre-emptive strikes if it even perceives a threat .Many of its aims are appealing to the average reader, yet read closely it is a misleading document.

As propaganda is a major weapon these perceived threats are big business hence the government turmoil over leaks , bodged reports, Walter Mitty scientists, and so on. In a month when N.A.T.O. goes further than its original charter to extend its governance over Afghanistan .this is what the Yugoslavian –Serbian war was about and its main aim. Many may say surely its better than Russia and Communism, but since Marxism is the main philosophy of the US military complex, there is no difference only a carpet bombing loss to life. The original N.A.T.O. charter did not envisage the need for Oil reserves in the Caspian sea hence its extension, in what was a European war, affecting many civilians

To give an example in the 1980s the US was placed under national emergency, when it was declared that the Nicaraguan army were only two days march from Texas.!. International polls during the Iraq war, suggested that 50 % of the American public (no not the native Indians who survived the invasion of the current occupying forces) believed that Iraq was a invading threat to the US, this would have achieved more than Hitler. Basically its the plot of the film “Die hard 2”..first of all bad guys (notice who were rouge elements in the US army) who are getting away with it ..until the good guys (also rouge elements in the US army are sent in, and of course both are on the same side and abscond with the loot and the South American general of dubious morals and politics and alliances) in the real world the accidental good guy cop does not show up with a cigarette lighter. In fact many thousands of civilians die hard horrible deaths...

Criticism of this type leads to comments of Anti –Americanism, but I have lived and worked in America and have read the original constitution .Its aims and views whatever we think of it have been usurped and sidelined by a minority within its own country.

A conclusion to be drawn from this is the USA could of course take over the world, it is no longer afraid to do so, yet it still has weapons of mass destruction, and a dubious attitude towards Christianity which it says is their God or faith.. The last person it is afraid of therefore is God himself as who is left ?.

Since the majority of Christians do not live in the west, and the middle east in only one war out of many who are these forces ranging themselves against. ?

Even with all the vast Arsenal of weapons and a good propaganda team, the biggest army ever assembled are surely no match for him, or is the Empire planning an assault on a higher plane or part.

Absurd as this may seem just who or what are they fighting for, because the time for individual choice is upon everyone, this is the T junction which influenced the thoughts of Pythagoras, one path led to the inferior parts the other the supreme, even Christian theology has this choice.

One American president said

“There is nothing to fear except fear itself” America currently runs on fear, its own population is afraid and the rest of the world wait to see who is next. Fear is not a sermon preached by Christ, and no-one was or is excluded by class, creed or religion or by continent or colour, certainly not by prejudicial convoluted theologies, cleverly contrived in his name .Disguising “free trade” advancements as the Gospels of the four Evangelists is the biggest threat the west has cursed itself with, and there is no enemy to blame except itself

The world is becoming increasingly uneasy and is crying out for some kind of leader or leadership to take control who could that be.

Earlier we described the armistice signing ceremony, as described by Paul from the book of Colossians, translated in Greek as ‘Apek duomai’ (pronounced ap-ek-douo–maiee) .The image depicts two armies one victorious, one defeated.

Such is the conceit of the Western powers that some for instance presume the victorious army, on the side of Christ, to be the U.S army or perhaps the N.A.T.O. alliance. they of course would be lined up against the defeated army say ... huge battalions of Muslims, or Communists..

For example..the reality is that huge amounts of men from all these Armies including N.A.T.O., will be on the losing side, as will countless numbers of civilians.

The Gospels are not Hollywood.

In the previous chapter we discussed the claims by various factions of the Royal Judaic bloodlines.The claims are reliant on the belief one of two theories.The hunt for a Royal King with a true bloodline is on.many will not believe this is true but unbelievable as it seems it exists all the same.

1. That Jesus and Mary Magdalene, made love in the garden of Gethsemana, and sired a child or children.
2. Along with the above James and the rest of Jesus brothers and sisters, produced children which along with cousin Jesus Christ son of God Junior, formed a Royal and supernatural bloodline. This bloodline took centuries to emerge partly due to the dispersion of the Jewish populace, by the Romans when the temple was destroyed in AD 70, and partly because Christians were persecuted, by Rome, and also by the Jewish authorities (including Paul initially who incidentally never mentions Jesus son or the need to hunt him down)

As Rome eventually converts to Christianity, the dispersed Royal Messianic family in the form of future surviving generations, feel it is safe to emerge. The novelty and fascination they cause although kept secret from the populace at large, begins to win them fame and wealth, and they slowly intermarry with the warlords and kings and Royal family's of early 3rd or 4th century Europe, and the Levant. Initially it seems they reappeared in France....with the cup of the last testament supper, ever to re-appear as the missing cup of the Holy Grail, especially in Indiana Jones films.

What can we make of it... firstly the idea of Jesus having brothers and sisters, was anathema to the Roman Catholic church (after the 4th century) as Mary was to be co-redemptrix along with Jesus and could not possibly be anything but pure. The Virgin birth was not in dispute, but after Jesus birth, (the firstborn) Mary did not have sex with Joseph !

The idea that Mary could also offer salvation came from the need to attract Pagan Goddess worshippers into the fold.

The bible however states that God is neither male or female but a Spirit⁶⁶² Its also clear the bible does state Mary and Joseph did have sexual intercourse, after Jesus was born, see Matthew chapter 1 verse 25. The bible also states that Jesus had brothers... James, Joses, Juda and Simon in Mark chapter 6 verse 3, also his sisters in the same verse (they are not the disciples) see further Matthew chapter 12 verse 47 – 49, and also Matthew chapter 13 verses 55 & 56. It also appears that Mary herself was subordinate to Jesus as she states (see John chapter 2 verse 25), and Jesus commanded her to obey him and or God (see Luke chapter 11 verses 27 – 28). Since God created everything he must also have created Mary, who could not therefore have been the Mother of God. As a biblical character she was undoubtedly one of the most revered and faith filled Christians in the book.

As for Jesus bloodline being divine, there is no mention of him copulating with Mary Magdalene. It seems she was however a prostitute, but then Paul was a killer, and Matthew collected taxes, does this make Jesus a moneymad assassin !. How could a Spirit reproduce ! .Of course the claim is he was just a man , but the descriptions cited earlier of supernatural occurrences would suggest, discounting co-incidence that he was something much more. The death of this Rabbi on the cross of course spilled the blood in this bloodline, and it is this blood spilling in innocence which is the cause of redemption in Christian theology. After his resurrection he does meet with Mary Magdalene who is the first to recognise him , and meet him at the tomb. Mirroring the command for the High Priest in Judaism, who has to carry the spilt blood of the slain lamb into the Holy of Holies, who cannot be touched under Jewish ritual law, he in fact commands her not to touch him⁶⁶³. This is hardly the actions of lovers.

The theological meaning, is he (Jesus) is taking his own blood and sacrifice with him in the Ascension into heaven, as High Priest . It presupposes that this is the blood of his Father also since he is the son.

A fact which is well known to midwives and Paediatricians alike, concerns the babies blood. The babies blood and the mothers blood during a pregnancy do not mix. The baby is fed through a little tube, which simultaneously prevents the bloods from mixing, yet still allows food from the blood of the mother, and herself to feed the baby.

This is to prevent blood diseases and ensures the male blood in the main is passed on to future generations.

Since woman of two thousand years ago are the same as today, this would also have been the case with Mary. Therefore Jesus blood theologically did not mix with Mary's and is still theologically divine. It also means that Josephs blood is human, and not "blue".

Therefore any relatives making up Royal Families do not have blue blood, although many might have nobility.

The idea however that Jesus brothers and or sisters could have been dispersed, or their sons and daughters could have dispersed, at the temples destruction in AD 70 is perfectly plausible, as proofs cited earlier certainly show he (and perhaps therefore they) existed .

If we can imagine for example the scenario “my great great great grandfather was mighty fine” as the song goes, and the modern calendar begins with his birth, and he is now worshipped in Rome by the Emperors, and was possibly brother to the Son of God !, anyone listening would say “getaway” and “have you any family tree or genealogy to prove it” ...soon as the descendants of Jesus Christs brothers and sisters, your fame would spread, you would be sought out and revered, and become wealthy, perhaps even marrying into the local nobility... the temptation to produce fraudulent documents, might also have been pretty high.

Does this prove that Kings and Queens are not divine, or that we all may be, or does anyone even care ! many wars and political ambitions have been fought over this issue, the dead and injured care. Without this belief the houses of Windsor and Spencer might lose their crowns, and the banks their Royal charters, and parliaments their authority in times of civil war. For Jewish theologians and politicians the throne of Israel is still waiting for a Messiah, and they cannot discount the Genealogy of Joseph and the fraudulent messiah (Jesus Christ’s), brothers and sisters bloodlines. This is the present situation which still makes genealogy and the Royal houses of Europe and the world, worth watching (and big business) for Jewish academics...as the Messiah is expected, and must rule in Jerusalem, out of these royal descendants he may well rise, if he has not already done so.

Maybe out there somewhere, perhaps from the lost tribes, of Celtic or Saxon stock (or both or other !) is the awaited Messiah who can fulfil the expectation, that the newly restored Israel will have its Messiah who will lead the chosen people...politics, in the everyday, or an average days media, never mentions these roots to the Royal families of Europe, but the Crusade to find and install a new and satisfactory king of Jerusalem is quest which continues to this day.

Mysterious as this seems, no one can be discounted from that King of Jerusalem title, indeed Christians are termed Princes and Princesses. What is sure is even without a title like this, or indeed any title, no one Pagan or Christian, has the right to discriminate, or be or feel superior to another, or to instigate racism, physical or spiritual.

Facism, using a simplistic analogy, does not realise it can grow out of its condition, just as dot does not realise it can become a line. Life is sacred and discrimination is a problem even sublime mathematicians have pondered, its just many have read numbers as data not as Psalms, which we could diminish by saying many of the Psalms are mathematically perfect, and much more than just three dimensional.
